The Problem of Single Use Plastics

Birds and Plastic Pollution A Case Study in Toronto May 6, 2021–Melina Damian

Display of 80 anthropogenic debris pieces found in a single nest © Melina Damian

When you think of a bird's nest, what's the first image that comes to mind? Probably a bunch of sticks and leaves bundled together – right?

Unfortunately, for birds that live in urbanized areas, they often use anthropogenic debris (otherwise known as garbage) to build their nests. This can result in entanglement or ingestion and presents a growing problem for birds – including many native species.
